1 Fake accounts

Some people may create fake accounts to cyberbully certain individuals or spam them on both sites.

---

2 Uploading

You may receive malware if you open a fake Facebook page and you might download a file containing a virus. Twitter bots force you to download adware or malware.

---

3 Personal data

You are not allowed to post someone's personal data such as credit card numbers, IDs, address or something similar on both sites.

---

4 Sensitive material

Nudity or violence can be uploaded to Twitter. However, it will be classified as sensitive material. On Facebook, nudity and excessive violence is not allowed.

---

5 Data deletion

Both sites can't and won't delete any content you have posted and other people have shared.

---

6 Case of Dispute

Twitter belongs to the court of San Francisco county whereas Facebook belongs to the court of San Mateo county in northern California, but both are subject to the law of California.
